“As this new movement of the decentralized web we may actually try to move towards this new era of distributed collaboration and interdependent cooperation.”

Primavera De Filippi at DWeb Summit 2018
The DWeb network connects people, projects and protocols to build a decentralized web.

A web that is more private, reliable, secure and open.

A web with many winners – returning to the original vision of the World Wide Web and Internet.
Since 2016 we have been a bridge enabling diverse communities to freely exchange ideas about the technologies, values, markets and agreements we need to move forward.

“Our motivation for making those protocols and investing really heavily in making them better is that it gives us a better Web, a better basis of infrastructure for the whole Web, for us to build on, and to build new tools and new protocols in.”

In 2021, the Internet Archive will be hosting DWeb Camp, a four-day retreat dedicated to building a better web — a Decentralized Web that supports privacy, security, self-sovereign data and digital memory.

Set on a farm nestled just above the Pacific, DWeb Camp will bring together 500 founders, technologists, global activists, artists, funders, policymakers and hackers to build deep connections across sectors.

“We think of DWeb Camp as an experiment itself. It’s an experiment in expanding our imagination about what the internet would look like if it were more inclusive, empowering, resilient, and fun.”

Following our successful 2019 DWeb Camp, 1000-person Decentralized Web Summit 2018 and 2016, this retreat will once again draw together builders and thought leaders from a wide spectrum of society, those who rarely meet at blockchain events centered on a single project. One emphasis will be on co-creating tools and infrastructure that can be used by the global communities who need it most: those with little or no internet and whose access to knowledge has been restricted due to censorship. We also seek funding to support our Global Fellows who work with these communities and to make it possible for a diverse range of participants to join in.
